ENRICHING LIVES THROUGH LIBRARY PROGRAMS

Libraries are champions of lifelong learning — places to quench curiosities, access technology, and explore new ideas, hobbies and careers.

But extraordinary library programs — the type of library programs our communities need and deserve — require funding and training that some libraries struggle to afford.

Donate online at ala.org/ccf.

Since 2003, the American Library Association's Cultural Communities Fund (CCF) has supported cultural and civic programming in libraries of all types.

With help from individual and corporate donors, CCF has grown into an endowment of $1.9 million, crucial funding that supports:

- professional development opportunities, both in-person and online, for library professionals at libraries of all types
- grants and awards that recognize excellence in library programming
- ProgrammingLibrarian.org, ALA's online community dedicated to library programs

Please join our important network of CCF supporters — including more than 500 library professionals, foundations and corporations — by making a tax-deductible contribution.
